Germany's Fighting Machine

By ERNEST F. HENDERSON

Illustrated with eighty-seven official pictures of every arm of the German fighting force: showing the Kaiser at war and the weapons he uses, and furnishing a comparison of the German war machine with that of the Allies.

Ernest F. Henderson is the author of a standard History of Germany, and a Biography of the great Field Marshal Blucher; has moved in German official circles for thirty years; made extensive study and research for a new History of the Fatherland; had access to official information and facts usually kept secret; knows the value and importance of facts and information; has gathered official photographs of every branch of the Army and Navy, and Air Fleet; left Germany less than a week before war began, bringing official pictures, secret facts, and confidential information, which go together to make the most authentic, important, and reliable work on Germany's place in the great war.

THE NEW MAP OF EUROPE

By Herbert Adams Gibbons

Author of "The Foundation of the Ottoman Empire"

This book is the first of the new Century War Books

No one can read this book without a feeling of pity and horror. The utter failure of European statesmen to solve by intelligence and reason the great racial, dynastic and economic questions which have for years confronted them is apparent in every chapter. Blind recourse to fleets and armies followed this failure. Only the realization of these facts will help the cause of peace.

Mr. Gibbons has a world horizon. He tears the mask from diplomacy.

As professor of history at Robert College, Constantinople, and as correspondent of the New York Herald in the Near East he has, for twelve years, been in close touch with the figures and events which produced the present world chaos. As an impartial, clear-thinking American he has written down the truth.

WINDOW DISPLAY PRIZE CONTESTS.

ON Feb. 21st last, it may be recalled, an issue of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY was held up by the Post Office authorities on the ground that an advertisement it contained infringed the laws of the United States governing lotteries. The advertisement was one of the Reilly & Britton Company offering a prize for the best window display advertising their novel "Diane of the Green Van." It should be noted that, not only did no element of chance enter into this competition but that no fee or requisition of any sort (other than the submission of photographs) was placed upon competitors. Furthermore, in this particular case (though there was a provision that certain window display materials would be supplied free by the publishers only to dealers carrying adequate stocks of the novel in question) there was no limitation of the competition to such dealers or even any requirement that copies of the book itself be made a part of the window display.

In short, in all respects, except perhaps the last, the proposed contest followed the lines usually followed in such window display competitions.

The local Post Office most courteously allowed the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY to be mailed on the promise that a formal withdrawal of the advertisement in question appear in the following issue. Accordingly, by courteous agreement with the Reilly & Britton Company, the offer was annulled in the next number.

The PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, naturally astonished at such an extreme construction of the lottery law, for which it was hardly able to find warrant in the law itself, and realizing the importance of such a ruling to the publishing world at large, endeavored to discover upon what definite legal ground this ruling of the Department's was based. This, in spite of some little correspondence with the authorities both at New York and Washington, it has never succeeded in doing.

Meantime, however, as was to be expected, the same question has arisen in numerous other quarters. Window display contests are, of course, an old form of exploitation through the retailer; and any attempt to bring them within the purview of the lottery law must necessitate, sooner or later, a definite statement of Departmental rulings on the new points involved.

A step in this direction was made in the Department's official comment upon a window display contest projected by the L. S. Starrett Company, makers of fine tools, and reported in a recent issue of Printer's Ink. It says:

The decision of the Department upon the advertisement as originally submitted was that "If the matter of this contest is to be admitted to the mails it must be understood that the display will not be confined solely to the particular mechanics' tools of the promoters," and that there must also appear in the advertisement a sufficiently definite statement as to what the word "best" means in the connection used in order that those participating will be advised of the standard of comparison to be applied by the judges.

The advertisement was amended by inserting the statement:

"Judgment of the windows will be on the basis of their power to create interest in fine tools," which was regarded as a sufficient explanation as to what the word "best" meant.

Regarding the statement in the article which refers to circulars relating to the contest mailed at Boston, Mass., I would state that a circular of the L. S. Starrett Company relating to this contest was submitted to this office by the publishers of the periodical in which the amended advertisement appeared, and attention was directed to the fact that the explanation of the term "best" did not appear in the circular, and according to a copy on file here a letter was sent to Walter B. Snow by the publishers, advising him of the omission, and stating that the explanation should be added to the circular by rubber stamp or otherwise.

The condition that every contestant must furnish a photograph of the window display was present in the advertisement as passed by the Department and is usually a condition of all window display contests, as the windows are judged from photographs.

It will be noted that the original Starrett contest differed very materially from the Reilly & Britton window contest in that it sought to confine the window to Starrett goods. And it will be furthermore queried whether from the viewpoint of the disinterested judges (trade paper editors) "on the basis of their power to create interest" is any more specific than "best."

Nor is it yet clear whereon the Department's rulings rest: the lottery law says, simply and clearly, "offering prizes dependent upon lot or chance." Just where the element of chance appears legally in a properly conducted window display contest; or wherein official definitions of "best," or restrictions as to the character of the window display materials used, either eliminate or modify that element it is difficult to understand.

We sympathize thoroughly with the Post Office Department in its expressed endeavor "to enforce the anti-lottery statutes strictly and with thoroughness." We appreciate the intricate ramifications in which lottery devices may disguise themselves and the difficulty of following out and thwarting such ramified misendeavors. The significant words "lot or chance" seem to the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY to afford the indubitable clue; and either a window display contest is a trial of imagination in conception and skill in execution in which the element of lot or chance in no sense enters, or else it is from first to last a crooked transaction in which every participant, competitors as well as judges, takes a venial part. There appears to be no middle ground.

This whole contention on the part of the Post Office Department seems but another evidence of the misguided nature of the present governmental tendency in this country to derange and mismanage private business by unwise and unwarranted supervision of details and hair-splitting confusion of terms—with the general result that business men are at once perplexed and discouraged in going forward with legitimate business.

THE editorial suggestion in the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY two weeks ago, relative to the possibility of initiating some sort of a trade organization to handle efficiently the sale of what are generally known as "subscription" books, brought an immediate response in the form of corroboration of our belief in the need of some such a retailing medium. One letter, received by us recently, referring to a work of magnitude and importance and yet of popular appeal, written by an author of the first rank, says:

"It seems to us that there should be a market for these three volumes alone, and the author himself regarded the work as his magnum opus. The book is somewhat too large to sell in the ordinary way, and too valuable from every aspect to be placed in the hands of the regular subscription bookseller. Is there not some reputable firm with a Salesman's Department who would probably be interested in marketing these three volumes, present price. If any such occur to you, I shall be greatly obliged if you will advise me." The need exists: the problem is to fill it.

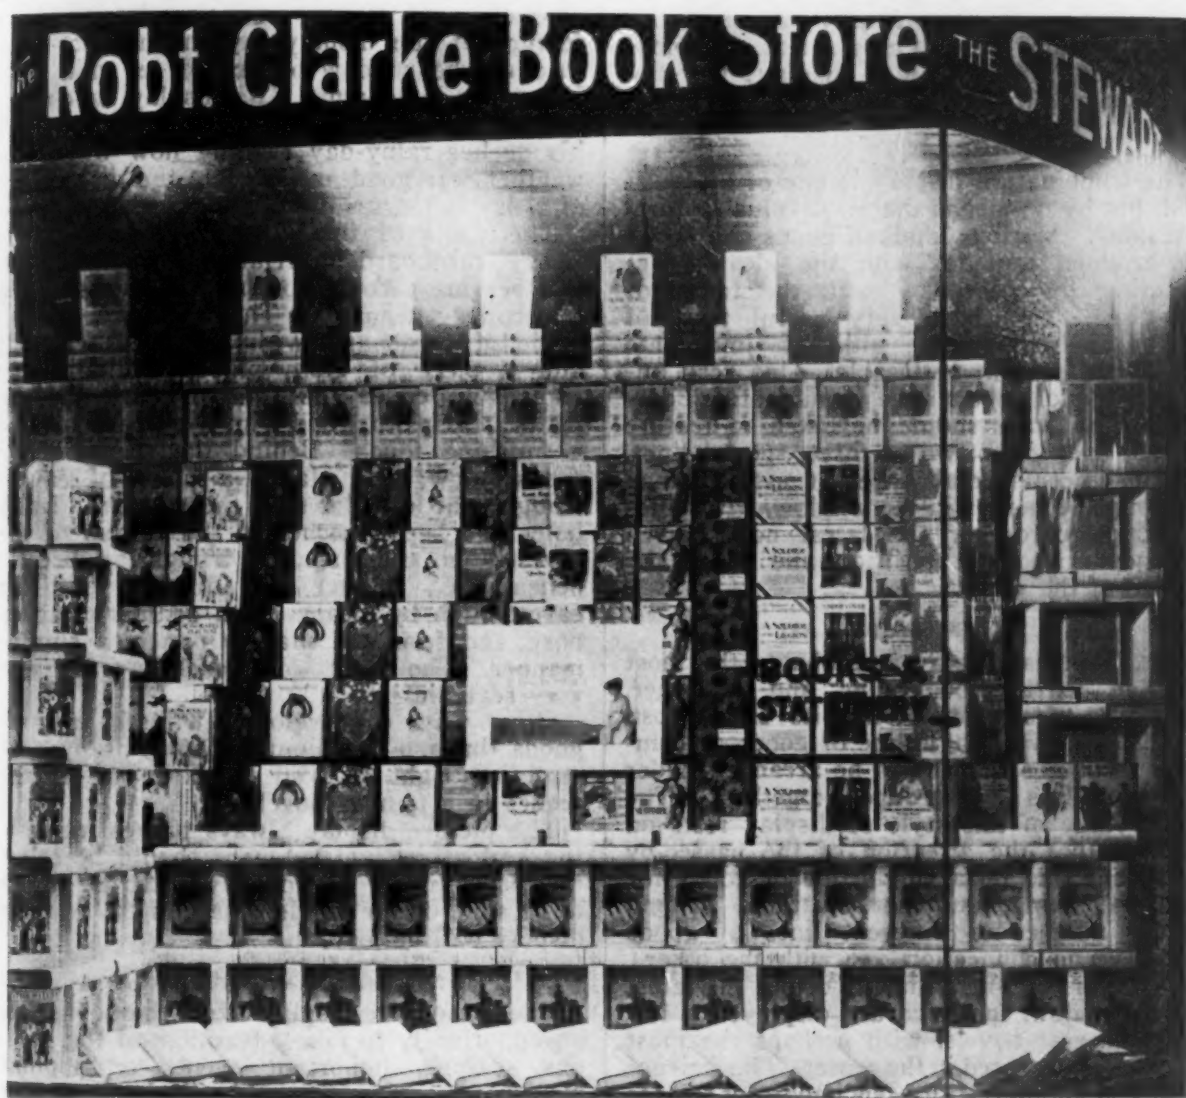

ROGER W. BABSON SPEAKS IN BOSTON ON "BOOKS AND THE BUSINESS MAN."

DURING the recent Book Exhibit in Boston, Roger W. Babson, president of the Babson Statistical Organization, spoke on the subject of "Books and the Business Man," a problem of vital interest to every publisher and bookseller.

While his address was directed particularly to the business men present, Mr. Babson made an especial appeal to publishers to educate buyers to be willing to pay the same price for a small book as for a large book. "The great trouble with the book trade at the present time, so far as sales to business men are concerned," he said, "is that business men to-day buy books largely as furniture for their offices and homes. They do not buy books to read, for the primary reason that books are too large and contain too many pages for the amount of real meat contained therein. And yet, I have known several good writers, in taking manuscript to a publisher, to receive the reply that their work would be accepted provided they would pad the manuscript so as to double the number of pages. I believe the first step in making book buyers of business men is the development of a small book. Instead of sending manuscript back to writers with instructions to pad the copy, the instructions should be that they condense it.

"Book dealers are correct in believing that it does not pay to carry books that retail for less than a dollar; but they are wholly wrong in their assumption that business men would not pay a dollar or a dollar and a half for a book unless it contained two or three hundred pages. There is no need for publishers to reduce the price of their books—this should be kept at from a dollar to a dollar and a half; but if publishers would gradually but systematically reduce the size of these books, they would find that the number of purchasers among business men would steadily increase. There are very few books published wherein the writer could not give the same information in half or perhaps in even a quarter of the number of pages. When business men see that publishers grasp this idea, and try to make the books as small as possible, instead of as large as possible, these business men will not only buy more books, but be willing to pay more for the small book than for the big one, on the same principle that we will pay an excess fare to go on a faster train."

Mr. Babson told an interesting story connected with an interview he had with Thomas A. Edison, in which the inventor compared a business man to an electric storage battery, declaring that men treat their storage batteries far more sensibly than they treat themselves. He used this story as part of an appeal to business men to give more time to reading and study. "If business men," said Mr. Babson, "would devote an hour a day to systematic reading along the line of the industry in which they are engaged, I believe their efficiency and income would be increased at least twenty-five per cent." Whether in the lumber, coal, wool, or any other business, there are to-day many exceedingly interesting books which the men engaged in such lines would find immensely valuable.

A STEWART & KIDD "FICTION WINDOW."

The sign reads: "A Real Chance to sail on the sea of romance." They say: "The window attracted considerable attention and proved a seller."

Mr. Babson also appealed to business men to broaden their reading along other lines. The various books that he mentioned were divided into four groups: Economics and history; Biography; Fiction; Books on applied Christianity and social movements. He especially urged business men to keep better informed as to the great social developments of the day, and recommended such books as "The Prophet of Nazareth," by Schmidt, "Christianity and the Social Crises" by Rauschenbusch, and also some of Prof. T. N. Carver's writings. He feels that Labor and Capital will never get together until each understands the other, and that such a state can best be brought about—to quote his own words—"by getting labor leaders to read such publications as the Commercial and Financial Chronicle, and capitalists to read such magazines as The Masses."

A good many booksellers are anxious to have their stores known as the biggest of their kind in town, but there is more money in being known as the best.—The American Stationer.

WINDOW DISPLAYS FOR AMBITIOUS DEALERS.

DISPLAYS DIVIDED INTO FOUR CLASSES—BALANCE, HARMONY, CONTRAST AND UNITY
THE PRINCIPAL ESSENTIALS—PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS AND CRITICISMS.

If one should judge by the appearance of the average window, says a writer in a recent issue of the Canadian Bookseller and Stationer, booksellers and stationers as a rule are poor salesmen, at least in the matter of window displays.

Many booksellers look upon the matter of window displays from a wrong angle. They consider the window merely a space for displaying goods, whereas the fact is the window offers the greatest opportunity for selling goods and drawing business to the store. No real good can be secured from your windows unless you take the attitude that the window is a vital selling factor and not a mere receptacle for storage purposes.

To get the most out of your window displays they must be arranged with a definite purpose in view and constructed on a clear and well-defined idea.

Window displays naturally divide themselves into four general classes: the combination display; the one-idea display; the picture display; the seasonable display.

THE COMBINATION DISPLAY.

The combination display is one of the most used, but by no means the most valuable form of display. Various kinds of goods and books are grouped together with the idea of acquainting the passer-by with the range of your line. This is a very useful form of display in some cases, although immediate results are seldom noticeable. One very important point about the combination display is that care should be taken to feature at least one, if not two or three, special lines. For instance, several different articles may be grouped together in the window, with newspaper, postcards, or the latest novel given the most important position and made the feature of the window.

THE ONE-IDEA DISPLAY.

The one-idea display is probably the most valuable to the bookseller and stationer, especially when considering its small cost. In this display a single line of goods or combination of goods that can be arranged under a single class are grouped together. The whole value of this style of display rests on the fact that the attention of the passer-by is concentrated on a single line of goods for the time being, and not scattered around over a number of different lines of goods that have no connection one with the other.

Under the one-idea display comes the latest fiction window, in which are displayed a few of the newest novels, with perhaps the most popular one featured in the center. The science display is another, with a few important science books effectively arranged in the window. Others are: the correspondence window, in which appears all the little requisites of friendly or business correspondence; the window of children's books, or the motto or framed and unframed picture displays, etc. Thus the bookseller may gradually impress upon the mind of the prospective customer in the most forceful manner an idea of his whole range of goods.

The picture display gets its name from the fact that a picture or scene is constructed in the window to heighten the onlooker's interest in the goods being displayed. Although this method of display is the most costly, the direct and indirect effect usually makes it well worth while to use on frequent occasions.

Probably the most impressive example of the picture display the writer can recall was one of "rainy day reading" used by a medium sized bookstore at moderate cost.

The window displayed the comfortable corner of a boudoir, with window and cosy, cushioned window seat. Here was seated a woman model evidently deeply interested in the latest novel, which she was holding in such a position that the title could be seen readily. Beside her on a little green wicker table were several other popular novels, travel books and classic works. But the real feature of the display lay in the fact that through the window one could see rain falling down in torrent. The display cards endeavored to persuade the passer-by to get in his or her rainy-day reading now while the weather was good and obviate the discomfort of a day indoors without the latest reading.

The walls of this display were made of heavy cardboard, overlaid with wallpaper, and bearing a couple of small pictures and a few college pennants. The window was also made of cardboard, with the panes cut out and a piece of glass placed behind large enough to cover the four openings of the panes. Strips of wood trim were used to give a finishing touch. Behind the scene, above the window, was placed a piece of eavestrough a little wider than the window. Little holes had been punched in the bottom of the eavestrough and a shallow trough lay directly beneath it. Water was directed into the eavestrough by means of an ordinary garden hose, and from the shallow pan in a similar manner. The effect of drenching rain was very realistic.

Other ways of developing interest in your goods through the picture display is by constructing right in your window one of the scenes in a famous novel.

The picture display always proves interesting and attractive, but care should be taken that it is linked up forcibly with the goods to be sold, or the whole object of the window display will be lost.

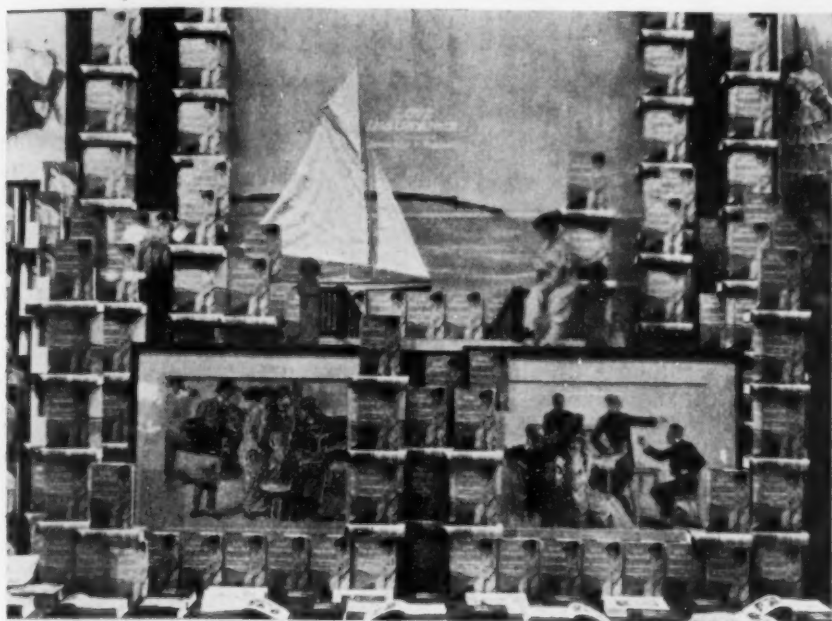

THE SEASONABLE DISPLAY.

The seasonable display offers the bookseller an opportunity to take advantage of the various seasons, important events or popular movements. The seasonable display is a very effective means of catching public spirit and interest when it is already developed. Besides the different seasons and special occasions, there are certain times of the year when public opinion naturally runs in a certain groove. Thus the first of June affords a good opportunity for a bride's display, the early summer for camping or sports display, late August for school opening display, etc. Their interest, however, does not last very long, and it is usually advisable to have the display changed in three or four days at the most, except in the case of the school opening or similar displays which may last for a couple of weeks.

To get the most out of your window displays it is well to get up a schedule, arranging to change your windows as frequently as possible and not less than once a week. Study your stock, the different seasons and public events. Endeavor to find out the kinds of displays that will have most weight in developing your customers' interest in your stock.

SOME POINTS TO CONSIDER.

The window dresser is just like the artist and his window like the artist's picture. The only difference is in the materials used. The artist manipulates his colors to produce a certain effect, and the window-dresser arranges his articles of merchandise. The problems that confront the landscape artist are quite similar to those of the window artist.

POOR business was never yet improved by "blue" talk. There has never been dullness so dull that it could not be made duller by exaggeration. The business man who is unable to see light ahead is in a bad way.—Geyer's Stationer.

THE MAINTAINED PRICE.*

WHEN you get off the boat at a certain prominent summer resort, you will find yourself besieged by innumerable carriage drivers, each vociferous in his expressed desire to "drive you around the island." You will be handed a multitude of business cards, advertising the rates of the various drivers. Careful comparison of the entire lot will show you, however, that they do not vary in a single particular. The prices are the same from all and to all. Looks like a trust, doesn't it? A combination to boost prices, mayhap. At least, so it would seem to the many to whom uniformity of prices is anathema. But how is it in reality? In the old days, before the uniformity of scale was enforced by a commission, each driver would look you over and obtain from you what he thought the traffic would bear. It was a case of whether you or he proved to be the more accomplished "dickerer." The commission decided to enforce the sensible rule that Mr. John Smith should ride as cheaply as Peter Jones, whether he was his equal at the game of beating down or not.

This is the inner principle of the movement for price maintenance—the equality of the customer. Contrary to the view accepted by many, price maintenance is as much for the benefit of the consumer as for the merchant and his employees, and those who urge the maintained price are as eager for it to prevail in the goods they buy as in the goods they sell. There are those who argue that the maintained price is necessarily a higher price and therefore contrary to the welfare of the so-called consumer. If mankind could be divided into two camps, one of consumers and one of producers, it might be possible to consider the welfare of the consumer alone as such. As a matter of fact, all are both consumers and producers. Even those who actually produce nothing usually do so indirectly in the investment of their funds. Smith is a producer of shoes and a consumer of not only shoes but clothes, food, amusements, automobiles and a thousand and one other things. Therefore he must approach a question not from the standpoint of the mythical producer or consumer, but from his all-round experience and needs.

The maintained price works directly for the benefit of the purchaser, because he knows that he is being fairly treated, that he pays the same price that every other man pays and that he is getting "the bottom price." The average man would rather pay five dollars for a Knox hat with all the backing and guarantee that the name gives him, than enter a store and dicker with the proprietor and finally pay him three or four dollars for a hat of unknown quality and origin. The dealer is a skilled professional. He must know more about hats than you possibly can. If you attempt to deal with him on the terms of dicker, you are matching wits with an expert. No matter how much "discount," "reduction," or "special concession" you receive, you are always in doubt that you have struck bottom.

The competition should be between the makers of Knox hats and the makers of other hats, not among the retailers. In the case of well-advertised goods, retailers are properly only the agents of the manufacturer—the last link in the chain between maker and user. It has been contended that when a manufacturer ships merchandise to a retailer, he absolutely and entirely parts title and that he can exercise no control over its subsequent distribution. Advocates of price maintenance claim that in the case of branded, well-advertised goods, the relationship of principal and agent is clearly defined. The retailer has no possible use for the goods himself. Title of ownership is without value to him. He merely serves to pass them on to the actual user. Thus, it is clear that if certain hats are advertised to patrons all over the country at five dollars, the makers should be allowed to enforce the sale of their product at that price. Otherwise they are as guilty of discrimination as Mr. Jones, who looks his customer over and decides the price by his appearance of prosperity or otherwise. Advocates of price maintenance believe it to be as reprehensible to discriminate between two customers because one lives in Michigan and the other in Ohio, as between two customers who enter the same store.

A well-dressed, prosperous-looking gentleman entered a bookstore in a New York State city and asked for a copy of "Charles O'Malley" by Charles Lever. The proprietor himself produced a copy in an edition the general price of which was fifty cents. The customer passed the bookseller a five-dollar bill and received in change three dollars and twenty-five cents. He had paid a dollar and seventy-five cents for the fifty-cent book. It is this manner of trading that is the natural fruit of the commercial method advocated by those who oppose price maintenance. "Up when you can, down when you have to," is a little sign-post on the footpath of price competition.

The maintained price will do much to lift competition out of the meanest, most sordid field in which it can exist—the competition of price. In the eyes of all too many customers, a cent cheaper in the selling price covers a multitude of sins. Unsanitary conditions, overwork and underpay, employment of children, are all forgiven if a saving can be made. This, we are told, all works to the benefit of the consumer. It might, if this same consumer were not also working under the same unfavorable conditions somewhere else.

Government officials, on one hand, are investigating vice conditions, low wages and similar evils. On the other, they are restricting or prohibiting all attempts to bring about stable, maintained prices which will make the other reforms possible. In a daily newspaper in a great middle-west city, there appeared, in the same issue, two highly interesting items, when considered in relation to each other. One was a highly flamboyant display advertisement covering three columns and announcing that thereafter offering cut-prices on several well-known articles. The other item was a small paragraph in the local column stating that

"GEORGE H. JONES was arrested to-day charged with employing children under thirteen years of age and with working women employees more than the ten hours prescribed by law."

Oh, blind leaders of the blind! Can you not see that this is no mere coincidence but an actual case of cause and effect? The cheaper price, if you really get it, must be given at the expense of somebody. Either the loss is made up by extra profit on other goods or it comes out of the wages that should be paid the workers. There is no alternative. Here we see the big store advertising its bargains every day. It is paying heavy rent and the owners stint themselves on nothing needful. Why delude ourselves into believing that the goods are being continuously sold at or near cost?

Cut-rates, so-called, give rise to all manner of dishonest and partly dishonest business. A certain drug store makes a practice of advertising well-known goods at very low prices, doubtless at or near cost. It is obvious that a business cannot be conducted, rent paid, clerks employed and other expenses met on any such basis. As a matter of fact, the clerks are given special premiums (P. M.'s, so-called) for selling other goods of the same general nature. These are not well-known, advertised brands, and they do, no doubt, carry a very heavy profit. Stern insistence alone will secure for you any of the "special leaders" mentioned in the newspaper advertisement. "The something just-as-good" is urged, nay, forced upon you. It is obviously profitable business to sell one article at cost in order to sell five at a hundred per cent. profit.

Another drug store also advertises extremely low prices. This is not done with the idea of selling you the articles listed, since this would be without profit, but to create a general reputation for cheapness. Then next time you want drugs, you go to So-and-So's because you think you will save money. However, should you purchase any of the advertised items, you will pay full price, unless you specifically quote the amount named in the advertisement. These and numerous other "tricks of the trade" are but the natural product of "cut-throat competition."

It is not intended that maintained prices shall prevail in all channels of trade. Indeed, this is manifestly impossible. Bulk goods, perishable merchandise, and the large body of unnamed wares will probably always remain subject to the law of supply and demand. It is on branded goods that are well-advertised that uniformity of price is most sought at present. This is on the theory that the manufacturer does not sell to a dealer, but through a dealer to the customers who use the goods.

Maintenance of prices, even on articles protected by patent, it seems to be the law's present intention to prevent. However, what cannot be accomplished through force of law, can often be brought about, in large measure, by tacit understanding. For example, the prices of single copies of magazines are not frequently cut, though there is nothing to prevent a dealer doing so if he desires. The general understanding among dealers and customers alike that The Saturday Evening Post is five cents, The Forum twenty-five cents, The Atlantic thirty-five cents, The Outlook ten cents and so on, has acted sufficiently to bring about practically maintained prices for single copies. So while it may be prohibited for a manufacturer to compel his retailer to maintain prices, a healthy body of opinion may be created which will result in price-cutting being a rare exception rather than a general rule. It is doubtful also whether any manufacturer or jobber can actually be compelled to sell to any dealer he may consider undesirable, even though the law does maintain that once sold, the maker's control ceases. Until such time, therefore, as modern ideas of co-operation supplant the old orthodoxy of free competition in our legal procedure, it will behoove all who believe in maintained prices and honesty in commerce as opposed to chicanery and hypocritical cut-rates to influence as many others—in and out of trade—to the same point of view.

The elimination of the maintained price would mean either one of two things. Either manufacturers and publishers would have to cease advertising any price or the price advertised would no longer mean anything because not the actual selling one. In either case, the possibilities of dishonest practice are manifest. If no prices at all are advertised, the buyer is compelled to match his incomplete knowledge against the expertness of the seller. Does anyone contend that it would be for the general welfare for advertisers to discontinue announcing prices? Yet, if this advertised selling price be not maintained, what manner of business are we led into. The selling price becomes a purely fictitious one and may be set at all kinds of figures for the special purpose of granting discounts. Not many years ago, it was a common sight to see sets of books marked "Publishers' Price $22.50. Our Price $3.75." On the box were the printed figures to prove the assertion. This mythical pricing can be carried to almost any lengths once the public has been trained to expect discounts.

If all the makers of soap in the country combined to raise the price of soap, it would be wrong. For the manufacturer of Ivory soap to be able to set the retail selling price of his own product is right. If he asks too much, other soap-makers will get the business. He has a right to protect himself against cut-rate dealers who advertise "specials" on a few well-known items at very low prices for the purpose of selling other items at an extra profit. That this loss must be made up on other merchandise is apparent, since no merchant can pay his business expenses and sell his goods at cost, or nearly so.

Sometimes, the cut-rate merchant is genuinely frank in admitting that his "leader" is only bait for him to make money off you in other directions, for he advertises that he will sell you his "special" only in connection with a general order for one dollar, two dollars or five dollars.

Modern business must rest on the secure foundation that every article must be paid for, every item from raw material to consumer must be adequately compensated. The maintained price is the most effective means as yet suggested to that end.

HOLD PRINTED COTTON IS NOT A WORK OF ART.

THE protest of the American Express Company against the Collector's assessment on lithographically printed cotton cloth at 30 per cent. under paragraph 266 of the 1913 tariff act, has been overruled by the Board of United States General Appraisers. The importers claimed the goods to be dutiable at 15 per cent. under paragraph 376, which provides for works of art. Though this particular case does not directly affect publishers it is of interest to them in so far as it bears on the question of the legal definition of "works of art" and "reproductions" thereof.

The merchandise in question consists of pieces of cotton cloth or canvas 21 inches in width by 33 inches in length, each piece having lithographically printed thereon a picture which is supposed to be a copy of some well known work of art.

The decision of the Appraisers (by Fischer) said in part: "From a mere reading of this paragraph (376) it will be readily observed that the subject matter thereof is absolutely confined to 'works of art.' It necessarily follows, therefore, that unless the articles here in controversy are conclusively shown to be works of art of the specific character mentioned in said paragraph they certainly can find no place therein. Now, it is too clear for argument that a picture lithographically printed on cotton cloth is not a painting in oil or water colors, nor is it a pastel, nor a pen and ink drawing, nor an etching, nor an engraving; and we are equally satisfied that it is neither a copy, a replica, nor a reproduction of any of the foregoing articles. By the simple reasoning of elimination, therefore, the prints in question would be excluded from the provisions of said paragraph."

General Appraiser S. R. Cooper filed a dissenting opinion based upon the following claim: "From the testimony and from common knowledge it is clear that the sample of evidence is a copy or reproduction of one of the world's famous paintings and works of art, and if the reproduction itself rises to the dignity of a work of art, it is my opinion that it should be classified under paragraph 376."

TO INVESTIGATE PRICE MAINTENANCE.

FLETCHER B. GIBBS, of Chicago, counsellor representing the National Association in the Chamber of Commerce of the U. S. A., has sent to the members a circular letter announcing that the committee appointed by the chamber to investigate the question of the maintenance of resale prices will soon be ready to meet, and that he had been asked to furnish several instances where standard makes of patented, trade-marked, copyrighted or branded goods have been thrown out by dealers because of price cutting. Mr. Gibbs suggests that members of the association who can cite such instances prepare affidavits and send them in to him. Blank forms of affidavits are included, to facilitate the extending of the information requested.

The questions asked in the affidavit read:

"Price cutting, i. e., the sales at lower than the recommended retail price on goods which are trade-marked, patented, branded, or copyrighted has resulted to my certain knowledge, in the refusal of a retail dealer to handle the same, or to reduce his stock thereof, in the following instances:

(If you are a dealer, and have been forced to partially or entirely abandon a line of this kind, give the details, stating the name of the goods, the reasons in full and all other facts. If a manufacturer, and your product has suffered in this way, give the facts, names, places, causes, etc., in full.)

"I can also state that price-cutting of such products has resulted in the lowering of the quality of the same, in order to reduce the price to the dealer, to enable him to compete with the price-cutters.

"I know of the following instances in which price-cutting was resorted to for the purpose of advertising other goods not trade-marked, patented, branded or copyrighted, and promoting the sale thereof at higher prices than could have been otherwise obtained.

"I know of the following instances where price-cutting was used as a cloak to cover the sale of damaged, imperfect or imitation products where the true condition or nature of the goods was not disclosed.

"Give any additional FACTS as to the loss occasioned to the consumer, dealer or manufacturer which may be within your knowledge."

CLEVER BOOK THIEF—NEW YORK BOOKSELLERS TAKE NOTICE.

G. E. STECHERT & Co. ask that the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY warn other members of the trade of a clever book thief operating in New York City. They say:

"We have just had some experience with a very expert book thief, and would suggest that you call the trade's attention to him in your very next number:

"A medium sized man with a German accent came in with a hand-bag and paid $1 on account of a book which should be procured for him for to-morrow when he would call. He looked around and examined American technical books on the shelves. But one of our clerks became suspicious and watched him and found that he put several books in his bag; the clerk went up to him and demanded the return of the books. Unfortunately the man was not held; it was during lunch hour when the chief clerk in the department and several others were out.

The man has a specially constructed grip which appears to be closed but has an opening at one end allowing him to slip in the books. This same man has been here once before and also paid $1 for a book which was procured for him for the following day, and we suppose that at least once he has filled his grip with books from our shelves. We have no doubt that he is doing this same business at other book stores or has done it."

COPYRIGHT NOTES.

ALLEGED INFRINGEMENT OF MAGAZINE COVER ILLUSTRATION.

THE Metropolitan Magazine Company recently brought suit in equity in the U. S. District Court for the Southern District of New York against the New Fiction Publishing Company, publishers of Snappy Stories, to restrain an alleged infringement of copyright, in a front cover illustration consisting of a girl's head. Judge Hough gave judgment for the defendants as follows:

It is only necessary to consider so much of the motion made as is equivalent to a general demurrer. The subject of copyright is a picture of a girl's head and bust. It is the work of a well known draughtsman, and was used to ornament a cover of the Metropolitan Magazine.

It was said in argument that it was the intention of the proprietors of that magazine to permanently (or for a considerable time at least) attract the attention of the public to their periodical as it lay upon newsstands by presenting on the cover month by month the same girl's head in various poses, so that the public might become accustomed to recognize the Metropolitan Magazine by the presumably familiar features of the girl portrayed on the outside cover.

This is of course a legitimate method of doing business, and is a style of advertising quite well known; but it has nothing whatever to do with this case. If another magazine publisher uses a girl's head for a cover decoration after the public has become accustomed to buying Metropolitan because of the familiar feminine features on its cover—possibly an action for unfair competition might be brought; but this action is for infringement of copyright alone, and the bill alleges in substance that the defendant has issued and distributed another picture of a girl's head and bust which is in some substantial part copied from complainant's copyrighted drawing.

It is true that defendant also publishes a magazine, and the offending girl's head is on the cover of its magazine, but for the purposes of this case such use of the picture is immaterial.

The infringement might not be so extensive, nor so offensive, but it would be just as much an infringement if defendant had placed its girl's head on a box of cigars, or indeed circulated it among friends merely as an attractive picture.

This action, being in equity, I have no jury before whom to lay the two pictures and ask them to decide whether one is an appropriation of any substantial part of the other. This Court is the judge of the facts, and decision must be rendered by it sooner or later. Complainant urges that it should have a right to interpose expert evidence, viz., that of artists or persons skilled in criticising works of art,—in order that the eye of the Court might be trained to observe those points of likeness (and also of difference) which would escape the untrained investigator. It has been decided that in cases of copyright infringement the evidence of experts may be admitted, but such evidence is said to be merely secondary; West Publishing Co. vs. Lawyers, etc. Co., 79 Fed. Rep., at 759, and cases cited. Ultimately the question of infringement or non-infringement is to be decided, not by experts, nor necessarily in accordance with their opinions. If the matter were put to a jury the way to put it is this: It is for you to decide from your consideration of the evidence and exhibits whether the draughtsman of defendant's picture has appropriated any substantial part of the original work, evidenced by and shown in complainant's picture.

It might well be that the defendant would never have thought of making a picture if the complainant had not made one, but that is immaterial; it may be that defendant deliberately made a picture of a peculiarly blooming type of young girl just because the complainant had done the same thing; but that also is immaterial. The attractive faces of young girls are, in an artistic sense certainly, common property.

I will therefore assume that in the opinion of experts, on consideration of these two pictures, it is seen that such essential features as the nose and mouth are much alike; that the neck muscles exhibit identical contractions in both pictures, and that said muscular arrangement is natural in complainant's picture and unnatural in defendant's, suggesting a slavish copying of the former in the latter, and that the "lights" and "shadows" are similarly disposed or arranged in both pictures.*

If, however, I assume that the expert testimony were as just stated, I should not after an investigation of the exhibits attached to the bill and submitted here, permit a verdict for the complainant to stand (if the action were at law). This course I should take because after assuming all that the expert is assumed to say, the ordinary citizen sees so many more points of dissimilarity than there are even claimed points of similarity, that it would be impossible to hold as matter of fact that there was any substantial appropriation of the original work shown in complainant's drawing.

It is probably true that color, as evidenced in hair, eyebrows, lips, etc., catches the eye of the uninformed far more readily than does drawing and that arrangement of lights and shadows which is called "composition."

But the average citizen is not deceived by that which he does not understand; he can see the differences in color, pose and facial expression, and when these differences are so striking as to prevent said average citizen from being deceived as to the identity of the two pictures, there can be no infringement.

Being therefore of opinion that no evidence suggested or conceivable to me would warrant a decree for the complainant herein, the bill is dismissed with costs.

SUIT IN FRENCH COURT OVER ALLEGED PIRACY OF A CARD INDEX

A COPYRIGHT case, involving the questions of the originality and authorship of a card index, was tried before the French Trib. corr. de la Seine, 9th audience du 26 mai, 1911. Although having little direct bearing on certain still unsettled questions regarding the copyrighting of individual index cards, it is of interest as being perhaps the first case involving such cards.

According to the resumé of the case in a recent issue of Le Droit d'Auteur, Freyburg, the plaintiff, summoned Merle on the charge of breaking Articles 425 and 426 of the French penal code and the laws of July 19, 1793, July 28, 1824, and February 9, 1895. His claim was that he had been directed by Merle, the defendant, to prepare an index-card bibliography of works on the cosmetic sciences, that he had prepared more than six hundred cards, and that Merle had then printed these cards without his, Freyburg's, permission, in the form of a catalogue for the Brussels Exposition.

During the trial it was ruled that the laws of 1824 and 1895 did not bear on the case, and that Freyburg's charges must rest upon the basic law of July 19, 1793, and upon Articles 425 and 426 of the penal code (which give authors the rights to their works and punish infringement).

To be protected by the general law of 1793, an author must prove his authorship and show that he has put into the work something created by his own esprit. On neither of these points could Freyburg establish a sufficient case. In the first point of authorship, he could not prove his authorship, being certain that not all the cards in the catalogue were his own, but possessing no means of proving which ones were. Furthermore, there was no doubt that the plaintiff and defendant had made an agreement on the subject of the cards, whereby the plaintiff's remuneration was set at a fixed sum, most of which had been paid; if the parties to the agreement disagreed as to the execution of the agreement, the very existence of that agreement was conclusive against any idea of the undisputed right to Freyburg arising from that agreement, or a consequent right to sue for piracy.

Regarding the second claim that the work must bear some stamp of the author's esprit, the court decided that the cards in the case showed no originality either in arrangement or wording, since they were arranged alphabetically and bore only the name of the author and the title.

The court dismissed the case, charging costs to the plaintiff.

NOTICE MUST BE AFFIXED TO EVERY REPRODUCTION OF A DESIGN.

A CASE, involving several interesting points of copyright, which has been in litigation for some eight years, recently reached final adjudication by the Supreme Court of the United States. The final decision affirms those of the lower courts; it is, in brief, as phrased by Bowker on Copyright in his citation of one of these earlier decisions, that "separable parts of a composite design, when used separately, must bear separate copyright notice."

The parties to the suit were Louis De Jonge & Company vs. Breuker & Kessler Company, both lithographers. The former firm printed some box covering paper, bearing a holiday design painted at their order by a G. F. Muendel. As is customary with such repeat designs the original water color was planned so that reproduced later in multiple the separable sheets would match and make a uniform continuous design. The original sheet was duly copyrighted, bearing a copyright notice once upon it.

Subsequently the competing company reproduced a similar design which the De Jonge Company considered an infringement. In the resulting suit the Breuker & Kessler Company offered a three-fold defense, claiming: first, that the De Jonge design was not a painting but a design for an article of manufacture and protectable, as such, not under a copyright but by means of a design patent; second, even if the design were copyrightable as a work of art, it could not be entered as a painting, but only as a lithograph or chromo, and therefore, the existing copyright was not valid; third, even if the De Jonge Company had originally a valid copyright it had become invalid by reason of the publication of copies not marked copyrighted. Both the Circuit Court and the Circuit Court of Appeals upheld the last defense above mentioned, the lower court also overruling the first of the three claims.

When the case was finally appealed to the Supreme Court of the United States the De Jonge Company claimed that to require a copyright notice for each part of the design was, under the circumstances, purely technical and served no useful purpose. Furthermore, they claimed that if the notice were conspicuous enough to be noticeable it would spoil the artistic effect of the design.

Justice Holmes, in delivering the opinion of the Supreme Court, stated in effect that the thing protected, and the only thing protected, by the copyright was an individual painting, the whole of which, so far as the copyright was concerned, was reproduced in a single one of the units making up the complete design. The De Jonge Company had not patented (as a "design") the unified design resulting from the combination of these single copyrighted paintings. Therefore, the only question before the court was the correct method of copyrighting the separate reproductions of the painting which made up the design. Since the painting in question had applied for protection as a painting just as if it were one of the world's masterpieces, it must therefore take along with this protection the same limitations that would apply to such a masterpiece; since the law requires that each reproduction of a work of art shall bear the copyright notice and since the protected object does not gain more extensive privileges because of being repeated several times upon one sheet of paper, the Supreme Court affirmed the decree of the lower courts in upholding the third defense of the Breuker & Kessler Company.

COPYRIGHT INFRINGEMENT OF A DRAWING—
MEMORANDUM OF ASSIGNMENT OR RESERVATION UNDER ENGLISH ACT.

A case involving as its most significant point the interpretation of Section 1 of the English Fine Arts Act of 1862 was recently decided in the English courts. Our account is condensed from that in the English Author.

The plaintiffs in this action were color printers, Messrs. E. W. Savory, Ltd., of Bristol, who sued The World of Golf, Ltd., for an alleged infringement of their copyright in a colored drawing called "Thirteen Down." The drawing was the work of Mr. W. Fletcher Thomas and was drawn by him in 1910. Mr. Thomas submitted it, along with some other drawings, to the plaintiffs, who purchased them and took from Mr. Thomas the following receipt: "Lydstep, Southwold, Suffolk, March 28, 1910. Received of Messrs. E. W. Savory, Ltd., Bristol, the sum of two pounds six shillings and sixpence, for 5 original card designs, inclusive of all copyrights. Subjects: 4 golfing subjects, 1 Teddy Bear painting. [Signed] W. Fletcher Thomas." Parol evidence was adduced to prove that the four golfing subjects referred to in the receipt were the drawing "Thirteen Down," and three others called respectively "Four up, my boy," "Rotten Game, Golf," and "Sorry." These four drawings were reproduced by the plaintiffs on a calendar issued by them and called "The Golfer's Calendar." In the number of The World of Golf for December 4, 1913, the defendants inserted the advertisement of a golf ball, and the drawing "Thirteen Down" was reproduced as part of this advertisement.

On December 6 the plaintiffs' solicitors wrote to the defendants and also to the advertisers and the printers complaining that the reproduction was an infringement of their clients' copyright and stating that unless they heard from them by return of post with an undertaking to publish an apology in The World of Golf, to deliver up all copies, blocks or plates, and pay substantial damages, they would take proceedings to obtain an injunction and other relief. In reply to this letter the defendants wrote on December 6 as follows: "We accepted the advertisement including this block in the usual course of business and in all good faith and published same in entire ignorance of the drawing being yours. . . . We quite recognize our responsibility re this, but at the same time feel sure that your clients have no desire to act vindictively against the two innocent parties, viz., the printers and ourselves, and think the following offer should meet the case: (1) We to publish in The World of Golf a suitable apology. (2) An undertaking that we hold no blocks, plates or negatives of your clients' picture (the only block we had was returned to the advertising agency after printing). That we are prepared to hand over to your clients all the copies we hold, some three dozen, and that no further infringement shall take place. (3) To pay our share of your costs. We have advised the printers of this offer and trust same will prove acceptable." This offer was not accepted by the plaintiffs.

At the trial it was proved that Messrs. Simpkin and Marshall, newsagents, were in possession of copies of the defendants' paper on the usual term of sale or return. The defendants did not call for a return of those copies and several copies were sold by Messrs. Simpkin and Marshall after the defendants had full knowledge of the plaintiffs' complaint. The plaintiffs issued their writ on March 11, 1914.

The defendants raised the following defenses: (1) There was no copyright in the drawing because it had not been registered under the Fine Arts Act, 1862. (2) There was no copyright in the drawing, because at the time of the sale thereof by the author there was no memorandum in writing assigning or reserving the copyright as required by section 1 of the Fine Arts Act, 1862. (3) The defendants by their letter of December 9, 1913, offered to give the plaintiffs all the relief they were entitled to and the action should not have been brought. (4) The defendants, being innocent infringers, were not liable for damages.

With regard to the want of registration the defendants contended that, under section 24 of the Copyright Act, 1911, copyright in an existing artistic work (i.e., an artistic work in existence on July 1, 1912) depends upon there having been copyright in that work under the Fine Arts Act, 1862; and that inasmuch as the last-mentioned Act provided that no proprietor of copyright should have the benefit of that Act until registration, he could not, unless he had registered before July 1, 1912, get the substituted benefit of the Copyright Act, 1911. Mr. Justice Neville held that registration under the old Act was not necessary in order to entitle a proprietor of the copyright in an existing work to the benefit of the new Act. It was sufficient if he was the proprietor of the copyright, and it was clear under the old Act that although the right to sue depended on registration, the copyright did not. With regard to the contention that there was no memorandum in writing, Mr. Justice Neville held that such memorandum was necessary, and that if before July 1, 1912, a painting, drawing or the negative of a photograph had been sold without a memorandum having been made either reserving or assigning the copyright, the copyright would have ceased to exist and no substituted copyright would have been acquired under the Copyright Act, 1911.

In this case, however, he held that the requirements of section 1 of the Fine Arts Act, 1862, had been satisfied, and that the receipt given by the artist to the plaintiffs was a sufficient memorandum in writing to the effect that the vendee of the drawing "Thirteen Down" should be entitled to the copyright. The receipt, on the face of it, related to five specific drawings, and, although the title of this drawing was not mentioned, parol evidence was admissible to prove that it was one of the four golfing subjects indicated.

With regard to the defendants' offer before action brought, Mr. Justice Neville said that he accepted the defendants' allegation that they were entirely innocent of any intention to infringe copyright when they admitted the insertion of the advertisement in their paper; but, in his view, when a right of this kind had been infringed by a defendant, the plaintiff was entitled to an order of the Court and was not debarred from exercising his right to sue by a promise from the defendant not to do it again and to pay such damages as might be agreed upon. The plaintiff was not bound to accept a settlement out of Court but could issue his writ, and then, if the defendant offered to submit to an order, and the plaintiff declined to accept it, and went on to trial, the defendant would be entitled to his costs from the date of the offer, if that offer embodied all the relief that the plaintiff was entitled to.

Upon the question of damages the learned Judge said that it was admitted that under the Act the plaintiff could not recover damages in respect of acts of infringement done innocently by the defendants, and that did away with a great part of the injury which the plaintiffs might have suffered. The sale of copies, however, by Messrs. Simpkin and Marshall after the date when the defendants had full knowledge of the plaintiffs' claim, was a sale for which the defendants were responsible. The copies were upon sale or return, and the defendants ought at once to have demanded their return. No doubt Messrs. Simpkin and Marshall were not bound to return them. They could have exercised their option to purchase, but in that event the defendants would have been relieved of further responsibility. So long, however, as the copies remained upon sale or return the defendants were responsible, and, therefore, the plaintiffs were entitled to recover damages in respect of these sales. He assessed the damages at 5s. and gave judgment for the plaintiffs for that amount, and an injunction and the costs of the action.

COMMUNICATIONS.

"GEORGE ALLEN & UNWIN, LTD."

LONDON, W. C., November 6, 1914.

Editor "The Publishers' Weekly":

Our attention has been called to the paragraph with regard to this company on page 1336 of your issue of the 24th ult.

It is hardly correct to state that Mr. Stanley Unwin is "the junior member" of this company, as he happens to be the largest shareholder, and incidentally vice-chairman and a managing director of the company.

Further, the businesses of George Allen and W. Swan Sonnenschein, which we have absorbed, were both founded some years before the firm of T. Fisher Unwin came into existence.

Your information is correct in other respects, and we shall be glad if you will kindly correct the mis-statements in your next issue, and remain,

GEORGE ALLEN & UNWIN, Ltd.

CECIL A. REYNOLDS, Secretary.

OBITUARY NOTES.

REAR ADMIRAL ALFRED THAYER MAHAN.

REAR ADMIRAL ALFRED THAYER MAHAN, U. S. N., retired, America's foremost naval strategist and the world's greatest authority on sea power, died suddenly of heart disease at the United States Naval Hospital in Washington on the morning of Dec. 1st. Though he was in his seventy-fourth year, Admiral Mahan was in apparently good health until the war began. The first month of hostilities deeply affected him. There were great demands made upon him for comments as a naval expert, and during the early days of the war he gave many interviews and wrote a number of articles dealing with the contest.

He was born at West Point on September 27, 1840, the son of a professor in the United States Military Academy. In 1856 young Mahan received his appointment to Annapolis, and was graduated with the class of '59. At the outbreak of the Civil War he was commissioned a lieutenant and was assigned to the South Atlantic blockading squadron. After the French library up to one hundred and twelve. war he commanded the Aroostook, of the Asiatic fleet, and in 1872 he became a full commander. From 1880 to 1885 he commanded the Wachusett, of the Pacific station, and shortly afterward was made a captain and appointed to the Naval War College. Rear Admiral Mahan was president of the college from 1886 to 1889, and again from July, 1892, to May, 1893. He commanded the Chicago from 1893 to 1895 with the European squadron, and was retired from the service upon his own application in November, 1896. It was not until 1907 that he was made a rear admiral on the retired list by a special act.

He was not a prophet without honor for he had received honorary degrees from Harvard, Yale, Columbia, McGill, Oxford and Cambridge and was the American Naval delegate to the Hague Peace Conference in 1899.

Rear Admiral Mahan's greatest book, "The Influence of Sea Power Upon History," (1890) immediately brought him into international prominence. This book is said to be in a measure responsible for the German Navy as it exists to-day. When it was published it was immediately translated into German. Emperor William was so impressed with the book that he ordered a copy placed in the library of every German warship, and ordered all German naval officers to read and study it. Emperor William praised it as the greatest modern work on naval affairs and the greatest work on sea power. His other publications were "The Gulf and Inland Waters" (1883); "Influence of Sea Power Upon French Revolution and Empire" (1892); "Life of Admiral Farragut" (1892); "Life of Nelson" 2 v. (1897); "The Interest of the United States in Sea Power" (1897); "Lessons of the Spanish War" (1899); "The Problem of Asia" (1900); "The South African War" (1900); "Types of Naval Officers" (1901); "Retrospect and Prospect" (1902); "Sea Power in Its Relation to the War of 1812" (1905); "From Sail to Steam" (1907); "Some Neglected Aspects of War" (1907); "Naval Administration and Warfare" (1908); "The Harvest Within" (1909); "Interest of America in International Conditions" (1910); "Armaments and Arbitration" (1912); "Major Operations of the Navies in the War of American Independence" (1913).

At the time of his death Rear Admiral Mahan was in Washington working as a research associate in the Department of Historical Research in the Carnegie Institution, with a view to writing a history of American expansion and its bearing on sea power. This was to be a monumental work, and he had given thought to it for many years. But he had hardly made a beginning when his heart gave way.

ACTUAL OCCURRENCE.

A LADY, entering a mid-Western bookstore, recently, inquired for "A Peach of a Devil." Conversation revealed that she wanted Gertrude Atherton's latest.

PERSONAL NOTES.

MITCHELL KENNERLEY has started a series of informal gatherings in his office, on alternate Sunday afternoons. Newspaper men and others are invited to meet and hear various authors on the Kennerley list. Nicholas Vachel Lindsay opened the series with a reading from several of his better-known poems, including "The Congo" and "General William Booth Enters Heaven." On Nov. 14th Frank Harris, short story writer, was the speaker.

WILLIAM DEAN HOWELLS, in a recent interview, professed the belief that: "War stops literature. . . . It means death to all the arts. Even the preparation for war stops literature. It stopped it in Germany years ago. . . . I have never believed that great events produced great literature. They seldom call forth the great creative powers of man. In poetry, it is not the poems of occasion that endure, but the poems that have come into being independently, not as the result of momentous happenings. . . . Of all the writings which the Civil War directly inspired, I can think of only one that has endured to be called literature. That is Lowell's 'Commemoration Ode.'"

CAN ANY GOOD THING COME OUT OF CENTRAL AMERICA? From Nicaragua there "swims into our ken" a new poet, Ruben Dario, considered by some the prince of living poets writing in the Spanish language. For some time Señor Dario has been living in Europe. Jean Richepin, the French poet and dramatist, based one of his poems on a book by Dario, and not long ago a group of Parisian literary lights gave a banquet in his honor. Among English critics, William Archer has taken special note of Dario's works. Not long ago The Athenaeum published a critical study upon him. Dario has written about a score of volumes, among which the most famous in Spanish-speaking lands are "Azul" and "Prosas Profanas." His most recent work, just published in Madrid, is entitled "Hymn to the Argentine, and Other Poems." Señor Dario recently arrived in this country on a lecture tour in the interest of international peace. His presence may be the cue for some American translations.

THE EUROPEAN WAR has been partially instrumental in introducing to American readers a Belgian poet, Emile Verhaeren, hitherto little known here, although a volume of his poems in English was published as far back as 1899. It was through Maurice Maeterlinck that his countryman, M. Verhaeren, has suddenly reached international prominence. When the French Academy recently proposed a signal honor for M. Maeterlinck the latter modestly suggested that a worthier recipient for such recognition would be Emile Verhaeren. While Verhaeren's name has been associated with "Futurism," his genius is too big to be constrained within the limits of a mere "movement." In his love for Democracy his obvious kinship to Walt Whitman has before now attracted attention. Like the author of "Democratic Vistas" he sees the beauty and the poetry that lie hidden in the life of our great cities. Modern science, modern thought have furnished him with his subjects. Above all, he is an intensely human poet, loving his country with a passionate earnestness that enhances the power and pathos of his verse in these days of Belgium's suffering and glory.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

"THE RISE OF JENNIE CUSHING" (Macmillan) is in its second large edition.

P. P. HOWE has completed a critical study of Mr. Bernard Shaw which will be published next month.

DONATIONS amounting to nearly £200 have already been promised in England for the Belgian Book Trade Relief Fund.

ISRAEL COHEN has attempted in "Jewish Life in Modern Times" (Dodd, Mead) to present a comprehensive survey of Jewish life in the contemporary world.

THE Christian Herald after eight people on its staff had read "Janice Day" (Sully & Kleinteich) placed an order for 5,000 copies of the book.

THE OLD SAYING that a prophet is not without honor save in his own land doesn't hold good out in the Hoosier state capital where Meredith Nicholson's novel, "The Poet," was the best-seller during October.

MCBRIDE, NAST & Co. published recently Colonel Frobenius' "The German Empire's Hour of Destiny," a book presenting the causes of the war from the German point of view and explaining the Kaiser's defiance of the opinion of the civilized world. It contains an introduction by Sir Valentine Chirol.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS are publishing "Deutschland Uber Alles," a monograph by John Jay Chapman based upon citations from German official documents and utterances by German "intellectuals," showing that Germany is mad with the same madness evinced by France in 1789 and later under Napoleon I.

MESSRS. SPON AND CHAMBERLAIN announce that they have made considerable reduction in prices on their imported books, owing to the reduction of duty. Their new price list is now ready. It cancels their four-page list in the Publishers' Trade List Annual, 1914-1915. Copies of this list will be mailed free to anyone desiring them.

AMONG THE JUVENILES offered by Rand, McNally & Co., are "Robinson Crusoe" and the "Arabian Nights," in the well-known Windermere Series; Cora Work Hunter's "The Little Strawman," and seven new titles by Elizabeth Gordon, "Butterfly Babies' Book," "Granddad Coco Nut's Party," "Watermelon Pete" and four "Dolly and Molly" books.

THE MAN with money enough to cultivate the oriental rug hobby won't hesitate over the dollar and a half that Dr. G. G. Lewis' "The Mystery of the Oriental Rug" (Lippincott) costs. The book discusses the characteristics of rugs and other topics, gives advice to purchasers, and contains thirty full-page illustrations of rare rugs.

THE SULLY & KLEINTEICH Christmas calendars are out—the Dickens, Longfellow, Stevenson, Kipling and last, but most interesting of all, the "Dinner Calendar." This last has on its attractively colored box and cover a reproduction of a Delft-blue dinner plate, and within is a daily dinner menu calculated to make Sybarites of us all.

THE NEW EDITIONS of Professor E. R. A. Seligman's "Principles of Economics" (Longmans, Green) have appeared this year, the new French translation and the sixth American edition. This well-known work in the American Citizen Series by the professor of political economy at Columbia University has previously been translated into Russian and Japanese.

IN ANY HOUSEHOLD which contemplates "building," Aymar Embury's "Country Houses" will be a welcome Christmas gift. Mr. Embury is a well-known architect of country homes modelled after the best traditions of the Colonial and Dutch Colonial craftsmen. His new book is a collection of plans with photographs of interiors and exteriors showing representative examples of his house together with descriptive material.

D. VAN NOSTRAND Co., New York publishers and booksellers, are sending out advertising matter emphasizing that "We are no farther from you than you are from your telephone." It's not a bad point to center a Book Christmas campaign about. In this connection capital might be made of the annoyance of hunting for gifts in the "big crowded down-town stores."

THE OXFORD BOOKS OF VERSE are gift books par excellence. In addition to the "Victorian," "Latin," "English," "German," "Ballads," "French," "Italian," "Scottish," and "Irish" Books, two new volumes have been added this year, the "Oxford Book of Spanish Verse" and the "Oxford Book of Canadian Verse." These books come in such a variety of paper and binding combinations that all classes of book-buyers can be suited.

WHEN ALBERT PARKER FITCH, President of Andover Theological Seminary, preaches in the universities of the East the chapels are usually filled, for Dr. Fitch is a young man's sort of Christian. Houghton Mifflin have just published a book by him, "The College Course and the Preparation for Life," in which he talks straight from the shoulder on the topics confronting the undergraduate.

HENRY HOLT will publish, under the title, "A Modern View of Christ," Professor Lucius H. Miller's recent widely discussed articles in the Biblical World. The volume takes up, from a modern point of view, the sources of our information regarding Christ, his life, teaching and divinity. So hot did the discussion of these articles wage that there was even some talk of unseating Professor Miller from his position as Professor of Biblical Literature at Princeton University.

THIRTEEN NEW VOLUMES have recently been added to the Collection Nelson published by Thomas Nelson & Sons, bringing the total number now ready in this praiseworthy

Among the new titles are "Poesies" and "Stello," by Alfred de Viquy; "Pierre Nozière," by Anatole France; Dumas' "Le Vicomte de Bragelonne" (5 vols.) and Jules Claretie's "Le Petit Jacques."

THE AMERICAN NEWS CO. does a large business with Spanish speaking countries to the south of us, and even with those as far away as the Philippines where $50,000 worth of goods is sold by them annually. Realizing the folly of sending out a beautiful catalog printed in English to a man who can't read English, the Company recently brought out an edition of 10,000 of their catalogs in Spanish. So confident are they of results that they have decided to issue the catalog annually.

THE MACMILLAN CO. published a short time since "How to See A Play," by Richard Burton, President of the Drama League of America. It is aimed at the theatre-goer and gives a concise, general treatment of the modern theatre that will help the play-goer to choose his play wisely and to appreciate the values, artistic and intellectual, of what he is seeing and hearing. Another recent Macmillan book is "Progressive Democracy," a solid study in American progressivism by Herbert Croly, author of "The Promise of American Life."

THE WAR has affected the Berlin printing and publishing trade in quite a tangible manner for, according to a report in The Nottingham Library Bulletin, the metal plates used for the printing of music have been commandeered by the Government for the making of ammunition. This means that no more cheap music in sheets and books can be published from the capital of Prussia for a considerable period. Stereos of letterpress books and type metal in the "cases" of printers will probably be used for the same purpose before long.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS announce a number of forthcoming books bearing on the war. From the pen of Richard Harding Davis comes "With the Allies." E. Alexander Powell, special correspondent at the front for the New York World writes on "Fighting in Flanders." A timely book on "Bruges" by Mary Stratton—illustrated by Charles Wade—describes the history and points of interest in this ancient city, now the center of the war cyclone. There will also be "The Diplomatic History of the War," a complete collection of the official documents connected with the war.

THE PUZZLE PICTURE BOOK has always appealed to little "kiddies," and Alice Beardsley's "The Turn Around Book"—a new Bobbs-Merrill publication of this sort—must look good to them. Verses and pictures are arranged so that there's a tickle in every turn of the book. The Bobbs-Merrill Co. is also offering for the first time three of the Christy-Riley books, "Old-Fashioned Roses," "A Discouraging Model" and "The Rose," at fifty cents. There are also six new volumes ready in the Riley Booklets series: "Contentment"; "To My Friend"; "Just Be Glad"; "The Days Gone By"; "When She Comes Home"; "The Glad Sweet Face of Her."

IN "HUMAN HARMONIES AND THE ART OF MAKING THEM," by Desmond Fitzgerald, there is an author's note entitled "The Way to Sample This Book," in which the writer states "that most authors furnish no way to quickly get at the contents of their books." After this foreword comes a preface or outline chapter and a complete index digest of each chapter or essay, "to enable the one making a preliminary examination to do so as quickly and as accurately as possible." This is approximately the plan followed in most histories and works of reference but a great many busy men and women would welcome its general adoption for all books.

THE PAGE COMPANY have succeeded in importing again, through Grant Richards, London, "The Message," by A. J. Dawson—which met with considerable success several years ago in England and America. In this novel the author forecasts the mighty struggle now being enacted in the war caldron of Europe. The plot involves a German invasion of England and the complete capture of London by the Kaiser's army, and finally—the ultimate result of the war—an alliance between England and America. The Page Company also announce the publication of "American Composers," by Rupert Hughes and Arthur Elson, which is a new-enlarged and thoroughly revised edition of Mr. Hughes' previous work, "Contemporary American Composers."

IMMEDIATELY after the war started there was a boom in both map making and map selling, both here and abroad. Now, according to a London report, pending alterations in Europe the mapmaking business in England is at a standstill. One of the largest mapmaking concerns in London asserts that such extensive changes were sure to follow the war that many scientific publications which were scheduled to contain maps are being held up until the end of the conflict, so that newly constructed maps can be incorporated in them. He adds: "It would be a loss of money to issue some publications with the present maps, for they would have to be reprinted at the end of the war. We are printing only a sufficient number of maps of Europe to meet the trade demand, maintaining no surplus stock."

To see ourselves as others see us, says the English Bookseller, is not always such a chastening and unflattering experience as Burns suggested in his much-quoted lines. We have been accustomed, for instance, to think of our country as one in which poetry has little pecuniary value, and is, indeed, more or less a drug in the market. But now we have a distinguished Belgian writer, Mlle. Coppin, addressing to England the fervent though humorous apostrophe—"Oh, beautiful country and munificent, in which editors pay for poems! . . . I have always loved the English people, but not until now did I really understand how much they deserve to be loved!" In Belgium, it appears, though the papers are not above accepting verse contributions, it never occurs to their editors to offer payment to their authors.

NO ONE REALIZES quite so well as does the binder the important relation between the printing side and the binding side of bookmaking. An unfortunate layout often makes satisfactory binding next to impossible. The J. F. Tapley Co., have just published a valuable and attractive little booklet of "Useful Information Concerning Book Impositions" which will be of interest to printer and publisher, alike. Besides a number of useful suggestions on general binding problems, the booklet contains a table giving the maximum and minimum full size sheets taken by the usual binding machines, together with the pagination of folded signatures and the style of machine, all with carefully labelled diagrams of various four, eight, sixteen, thirty-two and sixty-four page layouts. The booklet may be had gratis by members of the printing, binding and allied trades applying for it.

WHILE THE JACKET DOESN'T MAKE THE BOOK, it oftentimes proves a mighty good sales maker. The jacket on Herbert Adams Gibbons' "The New Map of Europe"—just published by The Century Co.—is a winner; it depicts, with the aid of plenty of red, blue, and black ink, a mighty mailed fist slashing a sword, hilt deep, across the map of Europe. Besides the matter which fell under his personal observation, Mr. Gibbons has drawn his material in this book from many interesting sources. For instance, he quotes from school books now in use in Germany, which praise Germany as "the heart of Europe." He quotes from the anthropologist Woltmann, who states that "the German is the superior type of the species homo sapiens," and from Wirth who declares that "the world owes it civilization to Germany alone." The book also contains six accurate maps of timely interest.

LAST SATURDAY the "Better Books of the Year" Exhibit in Boston closed. Carried on under the direction of Richard B. G. Gardner of the Publishers' Co-operative Bureau, the Boston exhibit has been one of the most successful of its kind ever held in this country. The attack of the exhibit has been centred around a series of "feature days" and the success of this plan is evidenced by the attendance, over 4,000 visitors being recorded for the first two weeks. In addition to the "feature days" described in an earlier issue of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, there have since been a "Players Day" when various members of the "Peg O' My Heart" company made addresses, two more "Childrens' Hours," two more "Authors' Days," an afternoon on which bindings were featured, with an address by the head of the binding department of the Boston Library and practical demonstrations by employees of the Library bindery, a musical afternoon, and other features.

"THERE SEEMS REASON to anticipate that one result of the conditions under which we are at present living will be a considerably increased knowledge of the French language—and, consequently, perhaps, of French literature—on the part of our people at large, at any rate in the metropolitan area. Not only can one hear the language of our good neighbor and ally spoken freely, nowadays, in almost every street, but the number of journals printed in French now being offered for sale in our London thoroughfares. . . . seems to increase every week. We may deduce another evidence of the tendency of present circumstances to promote a wholesome internationalism in the domain of letters from the fact that M. Poincaré, the President of the French Republic, who was a littérateur of distinction before he was an eminent statesman, is to be offered the Lord Rectorship of one of the Scottish Universities for the next term of three years."

MANY INTERESTING PIECES of Stevensoniana were sold by the Anderson Auction Co. of New York on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of last week. The total amount received for the 588 articles of the Stevenson collection was $47,291.50. J. H. Drake paid $500 for a copy of the privately printed first edition of twenty-two copies of "The South Seas." The same price was paid by the Rosenbach Company, of Philadelphia, for the exceedingly rare first edition of "The Silverado Squatters," of which only ten copies were printed for copyright purposes. The same bidder paid $110 for Stevenson's personal copy of "New Arabian Nights." Mr. J. F. Bullard bought for $400 a manuscript, "Notes About Robert Louis Stevenson," by his mother; $175 for Stevenson's copy of Walt Whitman's "Leaves of Grass," and $125 for the first edition of Stevenson's first publication, "The Pentland Rising." George D. Smith bought for $325 the sketch book used by Stevenson on his trip to France in 1878, and $310 for a sketch book with drawings by the novelist. E. H. Wendell paid $237 for the first edition of "Deacon Brodie," by R. L. Stevenson and W. E. Henley; $225 for Stevenson and Henley's play, "Beau Austin"; $175 for Stevenson and Henley's play, "Admiral Guinea," and the same price for the first edition of the same author's Macaire." Sixty-seven cancelled checks, all in the handwriting of Stevenson, were sold for $389.50. An autograph letter in Samoan signed "Tusitala," Stevenson's Samoan name, meaning "Writer of stories," brought $57.50. A three-page letter written by Stevenson to his wife from Saranac Lake brought $100. A surprise was sprung on the first day of the sale when Mrs. Katherine D. Osbourne, who married Lloyd Osbourne, served the Anderson Co. with an injunction restraining it from selling 122 items listed in the catalogue of the sale. Mrs. Osbourne claimed that the items in question, consisting mainly of letters written by R. L. S. to his parents at an early date, were hers and not the property of Mrs. Salisbury Field, daughter of the late Mrs. R. L. Stevenson, to whom the other articles of the sale belonged. These letters have been held up pending the decision of the court as to their ownership.

JULIAN STREET SETS SCHEDULE FOR WRITING AUTOGRAPHS.

A JOCLAR FRIEND wrote a letter to Julian Street asking the latter to autograph a copy of his just published book, "Abroad at Home." Mr. Street, to prove that he could be a humorist even when not professionally engaged, returned to his friend, who is himself a well-known writer, the following:
My Dear Young Admirer:

No; I would not advise you to become an author. It is better, always, for a young man to try to earn his living in some honest way, before finally abandoning himself to literature.

As to my autograph, which you request, I enclose you herewith my regular rates, and will be glad to furnish you with autographs, as specified, on receipt of certified check or postal order for the proper amount.

RATES:

One autograph, name only, on small, cheap card, 50 cents.

One autograph, name only, on fine gilt edge card, 75 cents.

One autograph, with words "Yours truly," $1.00.

One autograph inscribed to you, personally, $1.50.

One autograph letter, one page long (rather formal), $2.00.

One autograph letter, two pages (informal), $5.00.

Extra pages added to letters, each, $2.50.

A $1.00 book, with twenty word inscription and autograph, $10.00.

A $1.00 book, with long familiar inscription, enabling purchaser to claim to know me intimately, $20.00.

Love letters, $50.00.

Week end visits, Saturday to Monday morning, $100 (and exp.).

The last named rate does not include readings, which will be charged for at the rate of $25 for the first half hour, and $12.50 for each additional quarter hour thereafter. The rate, however, includes meeting five of your friends. Additional friends will be met at the rate of $5 each for men, and $7.50 each for women under thirty years of age. Women over thirty will be met at the rate of $2.50 additional for each five years of age.

For calling me by first name before five people, $12.50.

For calling me by first name before unlimited number, $20.

These rates are subject to change without notice. Satisfaction guaranteed.

Trusting that this letter will supply you with the desired information and thanking you for your interest, believe me.

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL NOTES.

"WHAT MAKES A NOVEL IMMORAL" is the title of a pamphlet—just issued by the H. W. Wilson Co.—which should be of especial interest to librarians and others who must continually estimate the ethical value of the new fiction. The author, Miss Bacon, was formerly Director of the Drexel Institute Library School, and Instructor in Book Selection, and is now in charge of The H. W. Wilson Company's Standard Catalog Series. The pamphlet is a revised form of the paper which originally appeared in full in the Springfield Republican and was afterward reprinted in New York Libraries, Library World, Minnesota Library Notes and News, Wisconsin Library Bulletin and in part in the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY.

Even the events of Richard Cole's death (he was murdered by an unknown person) failed to make public the facts of his double life. These were known only by the woman involved and Gibson, his confidential clerk. Young Robert Cole, the legitimate heir, had altruistic ideas. Stanton, old Cole's other son, was employed in the Cole works through Gibson's influence, to keep his mother silent. He was a drinker and lead disturbances among the men. Stanton's mother finally told him the truth. In a drunken rage, he tried to kill Robert Cole and himself. Before he died, he confessed to the murder of the elder Cole. Robert Cole recovered and went on with his work, hoping that the curse had been lifted from his family.

The Publishers' Weekly

Subscription Rates.

One year, postage prepaid in the United States, $4.00; foreign, $5.00.

Single copies, 10 cents. Educational Number, in leatherette, 50 cents; Christmas Bookshelf, 25 cents.

Advertising Rates.

One page	$25 00
Half page	14 00
Quarter page	7 00
Eighth page	4 00
One-sixteenth page	2 00

The above rates are for unspecified positions. Special rates for preferred positions (full pages only).

Higher rates are charged for the Summer Reading, Educational Number and Christmas Bookshelf, and for the monthly Book Review supplement sections.

Advertising copy should reach us Tuesday noon—earlier if proof is desired out-of-town. Forms close Thursday night.

Under the heading "BOOKS WANTED" book-trade subscribers, under their own names, are given five nonpareil lines (exclusive of address) free advertisement for specific books out of print in any issue except special numbers, but not exceeding 100 lines a year. If over five lines are sent the excess is at 10 cents a line. Books not out of print, unspecified wants, repeated matter, and all advertisements from non-subscribers, cost 10 cents a line. Objectionable books are excluded so far as they are noted.

In answering, please state edition, condition and price, including postage or express charges. Houses that will deal exclusively on a cash-on-delivery basis should put [Cash] after their firm name. The appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the WEEKLY, does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it endeavors to safeguard its columns by withholding the privileges of advertising should occasion arise, booksellers should take usual precautions in extending credit.

"Books Wanted" must be designated by actual title, not by "any."

Write your wants plainly, on one side of the sheet only. Illegible "wants" are ignored. The WEEKLY is not responsible for errors. Parties with whom there is no account must pay in advance.

Under "BOOKS FOR SALE" or for other small undisplayed advertisements, the charge is 10 cents a nonpareil line. No reduction for repeated matter. Count seven words to the line.

New York City

WE have been in business for upwards of 125 years and until within comparatively recent years have confined ourselves to the production of our own requirements.

We have at the present time an organization in the Printing and Bookbinding business second to none. Our staff of proof readers is one of the best in the country.

On account of certain recent readjustments, we now have capacity for doing an additional amount of Printing and Binding.

We can execute all kinds of work in the Printing and Bookbinding line from an ordinary pamphlet to the very highest grade of commercial Cloth and Leather Binding. We cater for high-grade work only; our prices, however, are very conservative.

Among some of the accounts on our books are the following to whom we refer for reference:

Oxford University Press, American Branch
International Textbook Co., Scranton, Pa.
Encyclopaedia Britannica
Doubleday, Page & Company
Presbyterian Board of Publication
Henry Holt & Company

Review of Reviews
Harper & Bros.
George H. Doran Company
Fleming H. Revell Company
The Bobbs-Merrill Company
The Christian Herald

W. R. Caldwell, and many others.

We especially refer you in reference to the execution of work of the most exacting character to Oxford University Press; Encyclopaedia Britannica; International Textbook Company; Doubleday, Page & Company; and Henry Holt & Company.

Best equipped House in New York for Composition, Presswork, and Binding.
Our equipment consists of Linotype and Monotype machines, Job, Flat-Bed, Harris, and Web presses.

Send us your manuscript and we will produce a finished product satisfactory to the most exacting client.

Reference List of New Publications

Recorded in NOVEMBER, 1914

This Reference List enters the books recorded during the month under (1) author, in Clarendon type, anonymous books having Clarendon type for the first word; (2) title in Roman; (3) subject-heading in SMALL CAPS; (4) name of series in Italics.

A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A: Augustus; B: Benjamin; C: Charles; D: David; E: Edward; F: Frederick; G: George; H: Henry; I: Isaac; J: John; L: Louis; N: Nicholas; P: Peter; R: Richard; S: Samuel; T: Thomas. W: William.

For books received sizes are given in CAPS, Q, O, D, etc., books not received sizes are given in Roman numerals, 4°, 8°, 12°, etc. Prices are added except when not supplied by publisher or obtainable only on specific request. Where not specified the binding is cloth.

Those desiring to learn the entire publishing output of the month in any one field should look under one of the following MAIN HEADINGS:

PHILOSOPHY	MEDICINE	LITERATURE
RELIGION AND THEOLOGY	AGRICULTURE	POETRY
SOCIOLOGY	HOUSEHOLD ECONOMICS	DRAMA
LAW	BUSINESS	FICTION
EDUCATION	ENGINEERING, TECHNOLOGY	BIOGRAPHY
PHILOLOGY	FINE ARTS	GEOGRAPHY AND TRAVEL
SCIENCE	GAMES, SPORTS, AMUSEMENTS	HISTORY

Besides the titles listed under each of these headings cross reference is made from each to a limited number of cognate headings which collectively give all the new publications of the month in the given subject or group of subjects.

Inquirers looking for books on a specific topic should look under the general subject to which that topic belongs, i.e. GEOLOGY rather than SILURIAN PERIOD; MATHEMATICS rather than CALCULUS; ECONOMICS rather than WAGES. Books regarding specific Religious denominations, countries and persons, however, should still be sought for under their individual names.
